PHL 493 - Internship Course, Philosophy Department
Generic Syllabus

Description
Any job that makes use of the skills we teach in classes in the department, such as critical thinking, ethical considerations, aesthetical topics, scientific problems, or social-political issues could serve as an internship. If you show us that your potential internship will help you develop your ability to think about philosophical issues outside the traditional classroom setting, we will approve the internship for Philosophy department credit. Practically speaking, students have completed internships in various areas, including environmental agencies, non-profit organizations, editing, public relations, law, and so on. The internship course is supposed to enrich your educational experience and to improve both your philosophical knowledge and your ability to reflect critically on experience outside the classical classroom setting. As such, you should be aware that the internship will be accompanied by assignments determined by the faculty advisor and coordinated by the Director of the Undergraduate Program.

Course Goals
1. Learning to apply philosophical knowledge in the field
2. Acquiring skills in working with others as a member of a team
3. Developing skills in expressing oneself orally and in writing by applying philosophical considerations to a selected co-curricula activity

How does a student arrange an internship?
The Philosophy department does not arrange internships for students; it merely oversees the internship. Students are responsible for locating an internship, with the help of the Department of Philosophy, the College of Arts and Letters, and Career Services and Placement. The Department does keep a file of previous internship requests, as does the College of Arts and Letters (located at 200 Linton Hall).

Organization
The internship course will be overseen and organized by the Director of the Undergraduate Program in Philosophy (DUP). The assignments and the direct faculty contact, however, will be organized and determined by the faculty advisor. After having found an internship students should first meet with the DUP who must approve the internship for being eligible for academic credit. DUP will propose possible faculty advisors. Concrete assignments will be negotiated between the student and the faculty advisor.

How many credits can a student earn for an internship?
Internships through PHL 493 can take place during fall or spring. The amount of credit varies, depending on how much time is dedicated to the job weekly.

Who is eligible to do an internship?
To be eligible for an internship, a student must be a Philosophy Major or Minor (including Philosophy and Law), must have completed a minimum of 2 philosophy classes in the Philosophy department, must be a junior or senior, and must gain the approval of the department (i.e., the Director of the Undergraduate Program).

The Internship Experience in Philosophy

Prof. Christian Lotz, Director of the Undergraduate Program, Department of Philosophy, Michigan State University, lotz@msu.edu
Congratulations on your decision to complete an internship. Internship experience enhances your post-college marketability and helps you transition better into the workplace. Completing an internship demonstrates both your commitment to learning skills learned in the classroom and applying them to real-life situations in the workplace. The actual work you will perform on the work site has already been negotiated among the CAL internship coordinator, and yourself during the initial interview. A copy of this description will be placed in your internship file with your application. But getting the internship is only the first step involved in your commitment to this experience. In addition to actual on-the-job experience, you are also expected to meet certain academic requirements as part of your internship grade. This generic syllabus outlines the requirements that must be met in order to receive a passing grade for the internship. Concrete assignments will be negotiated between the student and the internship supervisor (see worksheets)

How does an internship count toward a Philosophy degree?
The internship (Phl 493) will count towards the credits required for the major or minor, but may NOT be used to fulfill the 400-level Philosophy department elective requirement.

How does a student enroll for internship credit?
In order to enroll for credit in PHL 493, students must submit an Internship Agreement Form (available online) to the Philosophy Department (503 South Kedzie Hall) and make a first initial appointment with the Director of the Undergraduate Program (DUP). At that time, students may pick up an internship packet from the DUP, which includes the employer and student evaluation forms, worksheets, and other material. The DUP will help you to find an internship supervisor in the philosophy department.

Course requirements
The following list outlines all activities that will be considered in determining your grade. The final list will be negotiated between you and the internship supervisor (and depends upon the credits received for this course)

Activity Logs
You are required to submit weekly activity logs to the supervisor, which describe and record your internship hours and activities. Activity descriptions and rationales should be described as fully as possible. Submit your logs each week regardless of the number of hours worked (can be waived by the internship supervisor)

Paper Assignment
At the end of the internship, you will be asked to write a paper about the experience in connection with assigned readings. The paper topic, paper length and the assigned readings will be negotiated between you and the internship supervisor (and depend upon the credits received for this course). This paper should connect the learning you have done in your classes with the learning you have done on the internship.

Meetings with faculty advisor
You are required to attend meetings with the faculty advisor. These meetings will involve sharing your internship successes and discussing the assigned readings.

Supervisor Evaluation
Your faculty advisor will be asked to complete an evaluation of your work and will assign a numeric grade.

Prof. Christian Lotz, Director of the Undergraduate Program, Department of Philosophy, Michigan State University, lotz@msu.edu
Exit interview and final assessment
You will be expected to meet at the end of the semester with the Director of the Undergraduate Program and assess your experience.
